Wolf Rd. on 1932 Paving Program Says Smith

The following article regarding road work in Will County for 1932 by Will H. Smith, County Supt., of Highways of Will County, appeared in the Sunday Chicago Tribune, and special attention is called to the fact that according to Mr. Smith, Will County plans to finish paving Wolf Road from the Hickory Creek bridge to the Lincoln in 1932:

Will County last year completed a new connection between its county seat and Chicago by finishing its section of the Southwest highway with a pavement extending southwest from Wolf road near 167th street. Another major improvement in the motor transportation facilities between the two cities was the widening of the Joliet road by the state highway department.

Our plans for 1932 call for paving the belt route west of Joliet; extending Wolf road south to route 22; connecting South Raynor avenue, Joliet, to Meadow avenue, Rockdale; linking route 44 and route 22 with a pavement on Briggs street; extending Western avenue south from the Cook county line to Exchange street, west of Crete; and paving Cedar street in New Lenox.

Great County Belt Line
A survey has been made on a great county belt line which, when completed, will connect West Chicago, Wilmington, Peotone and Beecher.

Other 1931 projects were: seven miles of concrete east from Manhattan to serve with a stone road for a route to the Governors highway at Monee; three and a half miles of concrete east of Braidwood, connecting route 4 with route 113S; Joliet belt line was started. The paving of Washington street, Joliet from the Union station to the Lincoln highway, about two miles west of New Lenox.

Several traffic bound macadam roads were also built by the county during the year.

Superintendent Charles G. Sauers referred the request to the advisory committee.

schedule, Orland Park people will be able to attend shows in the city as they will be able to get back about mid-night. Heretofore those who did not drive their cars to the city, could not stay for the shows as the last train left Chicago before the shows were out. The new schedule is much appreciated.

Lucille Muff of Matteson Is A Charming Bride

Miss Lucille Muff, one of the charming young women of Matteson, became the bride of Mr. Donald Schlegel of St. Louis last Saturday afternoon at 4:30 when the ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Chr. Becker in the Zion Evan. Lutheran church, Matteson. Palms, ferns and baskets of flowers transformed the altar into a bower of beauty to which the bride, lovely in a gown of white satin and a long simply arranged, tulle veil came on the arm of her father, Mr. John W. Muff. Her maid of honor, Miss Alta Fortmiller, attractively gowned in turquoise blue crepe and wearing a turban of maline and her ring bearer little David Bruns of New Lenox, seriously carrying his lacy pillow, had preceded her.

The groom was attended by Leo J. Wade of St. Louis, a student in the medical school in Washington University of that city.

Before the solemn rites were read the Zion choir sang a beautiful arrangement of the twenty-third Psalm.

After the ceremony the guests assembled in the church basement to a beautiful and delicious wedding dinner at long tables on which tapered tied with lilies of the valley, a large white bell, and streamers of white and dainty green complemented the beauty of the bride's lovely bouquet of white Calla lilies and the bridesmaid's yellow tea roses.

Mr. August Muff of Wausaw, Wisconsin; uncle of the bride, served as toastmaster and called upon guests who expressed advice and best wishes to the newly married pair between numbers of music played delightfully by the Ohlendorf Orchestra.

HUNDREDS AT LAST RITES OF LOUISE ANDRES

Mrs. Louise Andres, aged 73 years well known resident of Bremen township died on January 29th following a difficult and trying illness.

The deceased was born in Orland township, November 21, 1858. She was baptized December 19, 1858 by Rev. Adam Muller one of the early Methodist ministers and evangelists in this community. She was taken into the membership of the German M. E. church September 21, 1873.

September 20, 1881 she was united in marriage with Sebastian Andres. This union was blessed with eight children, two of whom died in childhood. On October 29, 1901 her husband passed away. Then followed years of struggle and labor for her and her family, which, however, were blessed in the end and which were marked by a family life which was beautiful in its loyalty and its God-fearing spirit.

Surviving her are six children, Conrad, Joseph, John, William, Sebastian and Anna (Mrs. John Schult); thirteen grandchildren and three great-grand children. Of her six brothers and sisters, Joseph, Ernest and Henry Laun of Chicago and Mrs. Theodore Pawlick, nee Marie Laun of Wheaton, Illinois are still living. There are numerous other relatives and friends. The departed was the daughter of Henry and Marie Laun, former residents of Orland township.

Mrs. Andres came from one of the pioneer families of the German M. E. church and for years the Camp Meeting of the Chicago conference met in the grove on their family property. She enjoyed telling about those days and experiences. In the years when this church comprised two charges, her parents and their children were active pillars of the old church (known at that time as the "New Church"). Her faith was of a hardy practical nature and was supported by a warm life of prayer.

Hundreds came to pay their last tributes of respect at the final rites held Monday afternoon at the German M. E. church northwest of Tinley Park. Four ministers officiated. Burial was in the cemetery adjoining the church.

One of the favorite Bible passages of Mrs. Andres was the following: "Thou wilt light my candle, the Lord will lighten my darkness."—Psalm 138:28.

New Lenox Youth Saves Two Boys From Drowning

Edward Novak, 16 year old high school student of New Lenox is a hero in the eyes of the people of New Lenox and of his school mates as the result of the fine spirit of heroism he displayed Sunday afternoon when he risked his life in his efforts to save the lives of two small boys who fell into the icy waters of Hickory Creek in Brookwood Park, New Lenox when they broke thru the ice.

The lads who were saved by Novak are Bernard Studer, eight years old and his brother Earl six years old. The boys were playing along the shore of Hickory Creek and finally ventured out on the thin ice about 4:30 o'clock. The boys were about in the middle of the stream when the ice gave way. At this point the creek is swift and deep. Both boys started to scream. Novak and his friend, Jacob Blaauw who were skating a short distance away heard the boys frantic cries and rushed to their rescue. Blaauw broke thru the ice but managed to get ashore. Bernard Studer was paddling frantically to keep himself afloat but his younger brother was swept under the ice.

Without taking time to remove his skates, Novak plunged into the icy waters of Hickory Creek and pulled Earl from beneath the ice and then rescued Bernard. Novak has been none the worse for his plunge in the icy waters.

Noted Play Coming To Orland Park

One of the outstanding non-professional plays presented in the last few years "The Tinker" written by Professor Eastman of the University of Chicago will be presented at the Orland Park M. E. church on Friday evening, February 18.

This play while written as a modern comedy on the average 20th century post-war American home carries with it a deep under current of thought. To see ourselves in our homes as others see us is enough to make the most serious laugh and see ourselves in contrast with the personality of the Tinker will make the least serious think.

The author of the play, Fred Eastman is one of the outstanding leaders in the modern non-professional drama. This play is considered his masterpiece. The play was presented for the first time a year ago in December at the University. Rev. Mr. Jones who is directing the local cast took part as a member of the original cast.

A very fine local cast has been selected for the play all of whom have taken part in previous plays and have been specially selected for their part. The part of the father David Whitney will be taken by George Munch. Jack Whitney, his son, by Royal Glahn. Ethel Whitney his wife, by Miss Clarence Mahaffay. Marjorie Whitney, his daughter, by Miss Pearl Cooper. Jeremy Whitney, his brother, by Elmer Lysen. Jane Seymour by Miss Alfretha Young and the Tinker by Jacob Kramer.

Keep the date open because you won't want to miss this play. If you liked the previous play given by the young people you will like this even better.

W. N. U., CHICAGO, NO. 5-1932

THE STORY

Six bandits held up the steamer, Midnight Sun, on the Mackenzie, kill Jimmy Montgomery, and escape with gold dust and furs. At the Mounted Police post at Fort Endurance, Sergt. Alan Baker disputes with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, regarding plans for the capture of the bandits. Baker starts out in the police launch with five men. At the MacMillan trading post, Joyce MacMillan is thrilled at the arrival of the police launch. She had expected to marry Baker, and had been stunned at the news that he was to marry Elizabeth Spaulding. Stolen furs are found on the MacMillan place and evidence points to Joyce's father. Alan leads his expedition up the big Alouka. Compelled by Haskell's foolish orders to divide the party, Alan fails to capture the bandits, and returns to Fort Endurance. Haskell blames him for the failure and Alan is allowed to buy out of the Mounted on condition that he absolve Haskell from blame. Alan starts out of the country in a motor canoe. He meets "Buzzard" Featherof, famous aviator.

"Buzzard"—that's more like, I saw you sailing around up there when I got off the train. Made inquiries and hustled out here to the field. Was on my way down to Winnipeg. Expected I'd have to go down there, or maybe to Calgary, to find a machine and a pilot.

"Uh-huh."

Baker jerked his thumb at the plane. "Whose is that?"

"Looking at you. Belongs to me and myself. Unlimited. Bought it with cigarette coupons."

Baker's face brightened a little, and now Buzzard noticed that this hard-bitten man was deeply worried but was hiding his trouble and talking with a jest on his lips.

"So the machine belongs to you. Glad to hear that. Working on your own hook, I suppose? That's still better. Say, Featherof, how long are you booked up ahead?"

Buzzard had found it good policy to lie. If he made out there was a crushing demand for his services, it impressed people and got him jobs—sometimes.

"Oh, about two months," he said carelessly. "All depends on how much flying weather I get."

Baker plucked a blade of grass and chewed it meditatively. Finally he asked: "Say, Featherof, you couldn't shake free for a couple or three weeks, could you? Get sick, or have to get married, or something like that?"

Buzzard took thought as he batted an eye. A couple or three weeks. . . . Must be a good-sized job. . . . Might pay well. . . . Oh d—n the pay! Always thinking of pay. Getting commercial. . . .

"I might," he answered. "Depends. What kind of flying do you want me to do? What for a job is it?"

"That would take me some time to explain. I wouldn't want any man to tackle it without him understanding the whole thing, or then he might feel I'd dragged him into trouble."

Something in Baker's tone made Buzzard look at him sharply. "Nothing illeg—crook—out of the ordinary, is it?"

"It's all three, and then some."

Buzzard bit his cigarette. "And then some?" My eyes! Who're you declaring war on?"

"If you want to know who I am, I was in the Mounted. The O. C. here at Edmonton can tell you about me. And I can give you other references."

"You were in the Mounted?" Buzzard frowned thoughtfully. "Baker—the Mounted. . . . Say, haven't I heard or read somewhere. . . . Are you that Sergeant Baker down north near the Arctic?"

Alan nodded.

"My eyes! I've read about some of your doings. You're on a detective trick or something like that, Baker?"

With expert judgment Alan had been sizing up his new acquaintance, from his brick-red helmet, down across his oil-splattered jumpers, to his "side-walk" shoes. He read the daredevilry in this Featherof. He was a man after Alan's own heart. And he had a machine of his own! If only he'd go, it would save precious days looking for a plane and pilot.

Alan said: "My story is a long one. You look as hungry as I feel. . . ."

"I am, Baker. Let's go eat and then talk."

Alan helped him pull a canvas over the machine. Together they stepped over to the taxi. As they rambled down town they swapped war yarns, discovered several mutual acquaintances, and came down to "Alan" and "Buzzard."

At the Chateau MacDonald Alan sent a telegram to Colonel Steele in Victoria. He wrote it swiftly, not daring to think twice of the fatal step. "Am out of Mounted accepting your fine offer will you wire me five hundred as salary advance would be mighty grateful letter following with details.

"ALAN BAKER."

He and Buzzard ate dinner; and then for a solid hour Alan talked.

He told of the Midnight Sun robbery, of the chase, fight, escape, of Dave MacMillan's trouble; of his resolve to help Joyce; of Joyce going bravely back to the lonely trading station; of his run-in with Haskell, his getting busted, his buying out of service, his thousand-mile trip to Edmonton.

"But just where do the old crate and me come in at?" Buzzard asked.

Alan told him he was looking for an airplane, sketched the strategy of his campaign, explained his whole daring plan of running the bandits to earth.

He asked, "Will you go, Buzzard?" It was so very simple a question, but there was a prayer in his voice and eyes.

"Will I go?" Buzzard echoed, almost angrily. He put his fist down on the table so hard that the salt shaker jumped. "Will I go—on a trick like that? H—t's bells, what a question! Would I kiss my girl if she asked me to?"

Baker Jerked His Thumb at the Plane—"Whose is That?"

Alan checked him: "Just a minute, Buzzard. Let's get a couple things clear. One is the matter of pay. I've got a couple hundred dollars in my pocket and five hundred coming by wire. It'll probably take all that to outfit us, so right now I can't pay you one red cent. But I'm going onto a good-salaried job, and I'll pay you before the year's over."

"How much are you getting out of this? Nothing. Good! I'll take the same."

"But it's my affair, my quarrel."

"Then I'll horn in on it. And besides, I'll get my pay out of it in the long run. Look at the publicity value, Alan, if we pull a stunt like that! With all the headline advertising I'd get. . . ."

"But supposing your machine gets wrecked down north somewhere? It'd be a total loss. I couldn't pay you back for a long—"

"Usually when a fellow's plane is a total wreck, he doesn't worry much about the loss. All he cares about is a nice headstone."

"But look here now, and get this straight. We haven't any right to pull a trick like this, Buzzard. We're stepping outside the law. We're violating several hard and fast statutes. I happen to know."

Buzzard grew impatient. "Suppose we get down to essentials. You said you wanted to leave as soon as you could. Then let's talk sense. How about gas? This crate of mine isn't one of these transatlantic planes."

Positively the Latest in "Simplified English"

What is described as "a scientific and practical method of simplifying English spelling" has been worked out by a Swedish professor, who calls his system "Anglic." It is designed especially for the use of foreign students. The professor apparently has the idea that "Anglic" may become a sort of universal language, because, he explains, in the "true spelling" he has devised, that he wants to "pae" our "langwig the hiest kompliment possibl by endevering to mae it noen, uezd, luvd, and apreeshaetad aul over the world." Such a language—which all may read—has been worked out between the British railways and a number of foreign lines. It consists of a series of picture labels, affixed to goods carried by rail, which are going from one country to another. The labels show the nature of the goods

It'll do about seven hundred miles in a pinch, and then it stops and sets down. I'll have to get a pack-chute for you. A decent one'll cost three hundred. I've got to put on a new propeller; that toothpick on the old crate now is about ready to quit. A new prop costs like sixty. Then we need navigating instruments on a long trip like this. They come high. I could use fifteen hundred dollars."

Alan paled a little, but he said doggedly: "I'll raise it. I'll raise it somehow."

Buzzard was thoughtful for a moment. "Maybe," he said finally, "you won't have to raise it. I'll tell you what, Alan: you give me two hundred, and I'll try to manage the rest of it. You'll need money for your outfit and we'll have to keep some for operating expenses."

Alan nodded, though he did wonder what Buzzard meant by that word "manage."

They went back to the Chateau and waited. At three o'clock the wire came from Victoria.

"The five hundred is accompanying this let me know if need more looking forward to seeing you and presumably meeting Mrs. Baker."

"S. G. V. STEELE."

Alan was grateful for the desperately needed money; grateful for the personal warmth of Colonel Steele's message. But he felt that he had sold his freedom now and indentured himself.

Stubbornly he forced his mind away from the heavy cost and regrets that tore at him. Putting aside three hundred dollars for operating expenses, he gave Buzzard two hundred and kept two hundred for himself. After arranging to meet out at the field that night, they separated.

At a pawn shop Alan stopped and bought a pair of binoculars. Powerful x-12's of a costly make, they put a sad dent in his roll. Farther along he managed to purchase two heavy automatics, slipping the proprietor ten dollars extra in lieu of a permit. Then came emergency food for the trip and the flying togs Buzzard had advised him to get.

He still lacked a folding canoe, a number of small items, and one last piece of equipment—the most vital of all his adventure. Down to fifteen dollars, he went into another pawn shop and soaked his expensive watch and a diamond heirloom of his mother's, making the owner promise to hold them for six months. With a hundred and seventy-five in his pocket, and a second-hand Ingersoll which the old gentleman had kindly given him, he walked out, breathing easier.

As he passed a fashion shop, his eyes happened to be caught by an exquisite ceinture fleecée, a broad sash-belt hand-made in old Quebec. Thinking of the worn and faded one Joyce owned, he stood admiring this beauty, imagining how "rapturous" Joyce would be if she had it. She knew how to wear it properly, with a saucy grace that only the metisse girls could match, for the wearing of the bright girdle was an ancient voyageur custom rapidly dying out. . . . Forty precious dollars. . . . but worth the price if she'd like it, a gift from him. . . .

With almost his last dollar he went in and bought the girdle.

Later, through the gathering twilight, he walked to the armory. Two companies were practicing there that evening. By pretending to be a new Edmonton citizen anxious to learn how to drill and perhaps to join the militia, he not only got inside but was shown all around the place by a lieutenant impressed by his stalwart powerful physique.

The lieutenant went back to his duties, the companies went on drilling, the privileged spectators began trickling homeward. When the armory was closed at eleven, when the gaunt big building was locked up and deserted, it was Alan Baker who rose up, like a thief in the night, out of a big bass drum case in a corner on the ground floor.

Not daring to strike a light, he groped across the parade floor to the room where the lieutenant had showed him the machine guns and explained their use—to him, commander of a machine gun platoon through a dozen major battles! He felt around among various types till he laid hands on an old friend, the Browning air-cooled, A-10. He found plenty of ammunition, a better tripod, and lastly a tarpaulin to wrap the whole outfit in, for if he started down an Edmonton street with a machine gun over his shoulder he was not likely to get far.

Gathering all his things at the Chateau, he whipped on out to the rendezvous arranged with his new-found partner.

French Writer on American Culture

I should like to meet in every European country women as truly cultivated as those whom I have seen in the great colleges of the eastern United States—at Bryn Mawr, at Vassar and at Smith.

My students at Princeton were capable of following intelligently a lecture in French, and their reading was wide. To read the output of the younger American authors is to be convinced that it could not be the expression of an uncultured people. A novelist such as Hemingway, by his taste and his restraint, heralds a great epoch. A critic like Edmund Wilson would do honor to any French or English review.

The tone of the best magazines indicates a true taste for ideas. It might be answered that these magazines address themselves only to a small minority of highbrows, and that the rest are vulgar. But is not that true of all countries?

For my part, I think, like my fellow countryman, Paul Morand, that we shall have difficulty in saving our western civilization during the next few decades, but that one of its sanctuaries, along with Paris, London and some of the great European universities, will be the rocky islets of Manhattan.—Andre Maurois in the London Morning Post.

Plumb Worthless

Uncle Dan, centenarian and ex-slave, is a pensioner of a South Carolina family. One day, while he was drawing his regular dole, his present patron took occasion to rally him good-humoredly on not being worth the cost of his upkeep; in fact, of being lazy and no-account in general.

"Yes, seh, I expect that's right," the old man agreed. "But it ain't my fault. I remembers the day when your granddaddy paid $1,200 for me, and then Mr. Lincoln comes along with the 'manicipation' proclamation and made me just plumb worthless."

Hindus Eager to Draw Chariot of Juggernaut

The carriage of the great god Juggernaut now rumbles through the streets of Puri, India, a trifle faster than usual. This is due to the large number of policemen on hand, who hurry up the festival as one of the many precautions taken to prevent suicides. Juggernaut's chariot has thirty-two wheels, wide of rim, seven feet in diameter, and it is under these that impulsive devotees as part of the centuries-old ceremony have cast themselves. The Puri festival is one of the most celebrated in the Hindu calendar and annually attracts thousands of pilgrims. Great ceremony attends preparations for the journey of Juggernaut, lord of the universe, and his brother and sister, to the Garden temple, where the three gods pass a week. Hindus believe that when God comes to the earth he incarnates himself in one of the ten forms and that on the day of the festival God incarnates himself as a "Vaman" or dwarf and appears in Juggernaut's car. Those who are fortunate enough to see him, they contend, attain salvation. The orthodox Hindus believe, too, there is much virtue in aiding to drag the car about a mile, from one end of the town to the other, which accounts largely for the eager rush to Puri each year.

Romantic Cipher

Some years ago a clever American professor was asked by a young lady for a cipher that could be easily worked out without being too difficult to read, whereupon he penned the following:

U o a o, but I o U;

O o no o, but O o me;

O let not my o a o go.

But give o o I o U so.

When the key to this is obtained it hits like a love song. The secret of it lies in the facts that a naught is a cipher and that it is easy to make this word "sigh" whenever required. It reads phonetically with perfect ease, but the written form is perhaps more readily intelligible:

You sigh for a cipher, but I sigh for you;
O sigh for no cipher, but O sigh for me,
O let not my sigh for a cipher go,
But give sigh for sigh, for I sigh for you so.

The Grave of Ann Rutledge

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

You are riding in your automobile on a paved road from Peoria to Springfield, Ill. Off to the west runs a branch road, also a modern highway. If you follow it, in a little while, you come to the town of Petersburg—just another little Middle Western city. But keep on going south. Now you are following a winding road which leads up on the bluffs overlooking the Sangamon river. Suddenly you forget that you are riding in an automobile and that you have been speeding over a modern concrete road. You forget that this is 1932. For a hundred years roll back and it is the year 1832. The magic which has brought about this transformation is the sight of a little cluster of log cabins scattered over a grassy tract of some 60 acres which unfolds before you.

The cabins are empty, it is true, but if you have any imagination at all, it's easy enough to people them. Come over here to this cabin. The sign in front of it says that it is the Offut store. Walk inside. There behind the rough plank counter a tall, gangling, awkward-looking young man is unrolling a bolt of calico and holding it out to the appraising fingers of a woman in a homespun dress. Do you recognize him? No?

Well, then, come over here to this big double log cabin. The sign on the front says it is the Rutledge tavern. It is evening and in front of the fire which blazes in the big fireplace at one end of the room is a group of men. It's pretty likely they'll be listening to a story which this same tall, gangling, awkward-looking young man is telling. Back in the shadows you may be able to see the form of a young girl—an unusually attractive girl even though she is dressed in calico. She is the daughter of the tavern-keeper and her name is Ann. But if by chance the tall man isn't in the Rutledge tavern let's take a look in another cabin nearby. It's the cooper shop of a certain Henry Onstott. There's a fireplace here, too, and stretched out on the floor in front of it is this young man we've been seeking. Of course, you've guessed who it is by now. But just in case you haven't, ask him to let you take his book for a moment. Look on the flyleaf in front and there you'll see the name "A. Lincoln."

Of all the memorials that have been erected to the memory of Abraham Lincoln this one on the banks of the Sangamon river in Menard county, Illinois, is unique. It is no imposing edifice of marble or granite. It contains no work from the chisel and mallet of a great sculptor, portraying once more the familiar face and form of the Great Emancipator. But when the projected reconstruction work is completed, the village of New Salem, where Lincoln "passed from raw untutored youth to strong intellectual manhood," will be a place where his fellow-Americans can go and in the atmosphere of that place they can more nearly feel a spiritual kinship to him than in any other place dedicated to his memory.

Of Old Salem park, the state park which has been established there, a recent bulletin of the Illinois department of public works and buildings says:

"It was a small town but it gave birth to a Great Soul. When Lincoln at the age of twenty-two, drifted down the river in 1831 and stranded his boat upon the famous mill dam at Old Salem, the town was only two years old, but in those two years it had gained a population of one hundred inhabitants and scattered along its one long street on either side there were in the neighborhood of 25 cabins of varying size including the large, two-story double room tavern. "Here he came a friendless overgrown boy, uncouth, uneducated, with a knowledge of only the barest rudiments of reading, writing and arithmetic. Here he chopped wood, tended store, became a merchant for himself, narrowly avoiding bankruptcy and utterly failed in commercial lines. He was appointed postmaster, using his hat for his office. He acted as surveyor and his monuments are yet taken as authority. . . . Here he studied grammar, philosophy and law and learned to debate against men of learning."

"During his residence here his character was formed; his education was completed, his name of 'Honest Abe' acquired; he caught the urge to serve humanity in a big broad, unselfish way. Here sweet chapters were written into his great life which grip the hearts of men throughout the world. . . .

"With Lincoln's departure in 1837 for wider fields, Old Salem having served its purpose, went into a decline and became a deserted village. Its cabins were removed to Petersburg where fortunately one was preserved. This was the Onstott Cooper shop where by the light of the cooper's shingles, Lincoln studied Shakespeare, Burns and Blackstone. It has been returned to its original foundation at Old Salem.

"Salem is the old Biblical word meaning 'peace' and here if you have any sentiment coursing in your blood, you will find peace. Perfect peace hovers over this serene, stately eminence of green jutting out into the quiet sea of prairie and woodland. Old Salem never ceased to mean much to Lincoln. He expected to make it his rural home after his second Presidency."

"Research work has brought to view the original foundations of every log cabin along these forgotten streets, the almost obliterated road leading out of the village to Springfield and the path from Offut's store where Lincoln clerked, down to the grist mill where he was wont to officiate. Soon all log cabins will be restored on their original foundations and all cabins, shops and mill will be furnished as they were in 1831.

"When this work is tactfully done, the semblance of a vanished era will be perfect. The associations, the taverns, the homes, the old well which is now in use, the paths of a great life will be eloquently imparted to us. The six happiest and most fruitful years Abraham Lincoln had spent up to this time in his life will lie before us more vividly than tongue or pen could describe them."

So far the buildings which have been restored are the Rutledge tavern, the Offut store, near which took place the famous Armstrong-Lincoln wrestling match; the store where Lincoln and William Berry were business partners; the Henry Onstott cooper shop and the Hill and McNamar store. There is also a handsome stone structure which is used as a Lincoln museum, containing many interesting Lincoln relics. Although the original town was named New Salem, the state park and the restored village is called Old Salem. This was necessary because there is a New Salem in Pike county, Illinois, and a town of Salem in Marion county. So to prevent confusion, it was thought best to call the resurrected town Old Salem.

It was during Lincoln's life in New Salem that there became associated with his name some of the innumerable stories so familiar to all of us. Some of them are sufficiently authenticated to be accepted as fact but others are pure legend. Not the least of the services of the late Senator Albert J. Beveridge in his monumental biography of Lincoln, published by the Houghton Mifflin company some four years ago, was the confirming of some of these legends and the dispelling of others so that an authentic portrait of Lincoln emerged from the great mass of evidence of which he examined.

The high spot in Lincoln's career at New Salem in the mind of most people, no doubt, was his romance with Ann Rutledge, daughter of the tavernkeeper, over which so many writers have rhapsodized, albeit usually inaccurately. There was a very substantial basis of fact for the legend which has sprung up about this love affair, but it was not the "grand passion" which has been so often depicted. Of her Beveridge says:

"Ann appears to have been the most attractive girl in New Salem and was courted by the two most prominent and prosperous young men of the village, Samuel Hill and John McNamar. McNamar was her favorite and she became engaged to the thrifty young financier with whom, it would appear, she was very much in love. Lincoln, too, 'had great partialities' for her, but McNamar stood in his way. . . . McNamar and Lincoln were friends and the young merchant did not know that Lincoln was 'paying any particular attention to any of the Young Ladies of my acquaintance' as, indeed, he was not at that time. On her part, Ann was not then 'favorably impressed' with Lincoln, who was 'young, poor and awkward' and without prospects, while both Hill and McNamar were 'up in the world'."

McNamar went by the name of McNiel in New Salem, a name which he had assumed when he left his home in New York to seek his fortune in the West and pay off the debts which his father had accumulated. His only reason for the change of name was in order "to avoid pursuit by his parents" and there was no disgrace attached to that change. But it led to tragedy just the same. For McNamar went back East, fell ill and with other troubles piling up on him, his letters to Ann, to whom he had confessed his real name, became infrequent and finally ceased coming to New Salem.

"Troubled that letters from her betrothed no longer came, Ann told her parents of McNamar's change of name. Suspicion instantly sprang up and possessed the Rutledge family. Rumor of the circumstances soon ran from cabin to cabin in the little hamlet; gossip made the worst of the situation. . . . Ann had been abandoned."

"So stood matters when Lincoln, through whose hands (as postmaster at the time) her correspondence with McNamar had passed, began his courtship, the nature and course of which are misty. No positive engagement resulted, although it seems that there was a tentative agreement to marry, 'conditional,' however, asserts Ann's brother, 'to an honorable release from the contract with McNamar.' Indeed, when urged by her younger brother, David, to marry Lincoln, Ann refused until she could see McNamar again and 'inform him of the change.'"

But she was destined never to see him again for she died on August 25, 1835. "When Lincoln came from the bedside of the dying girl, observers noted that he was despondent and, when she died, he appeared gloomy and dejected. Again, in the village, 'old people' wagged their heads and said that he was mentally unbalanced, this time because of sorrow. 'But various opinions obtained as to the cause of his change, some thought it was an increased application to his law studies, others that it was deep anguish of soul (as he was all soul) over the Loss of Miss R.'"

Beveridge then quotes another biographer of Lincoln as saying "Gossip and imagination have represented this early romance as casting a shadow over his whole after life, and as having produced something bordering upon insanity. The picture has been somewhat too highly colored and the story made rather too tragic." It was sufficiently tragic for the first love of Ann Rutledge for some three months later McNamar came back to New Salem to find his betrothed dead.

LIKE THE THOUGHT OF BEING MARTYRS

Some Deliberately Seem to Cultivate the Habit.

Successes are all right, but it's your failures that make life really worth while—if you are really interested in the art of Martyrdom. All that's necessary to make you a top-flight martyr is to convince yourself (a) that you have been wronged, and (b) that you have great Spiritual Qualities.

Take business, for instance. You are anxious to put that transaction across, and you go to Smithers and give him your sales talk. He retaliates by giving you a super sales talk in which he explains clearly why your schemes are all wet. If you are foolish you put that down as a tough break, and sulk about it. If you are wise you become a Martyr on the Altar of Big Business, and have loads of fun. You convince yourself that you are a Noble Soul—not interested in material things, a Soul too good for the crass mercenary world in which you have been placed. People don't appreciate your Spiritual Side. Cultivate the habit of not being appreciated, and in no time you'll be so happy you could sing.

Or take sport. You go into a tournamant, and take a beating from some duffer who obviously has no more Spiritual Qualities than a side order of spinach. Is your failure due to inability? Nonsense. It's due to your Spiritual Qualities. Think of the people you've been practicing with. Haven't you sacrificed yourself? Haven't you been playing against inferior opposition just to give the others joy? Of course you have, if you're worth 2 cents as a martyr. Couldn't you beat anybody in the world if you concentrated purely on winning instead of playing for the Joy of the Game? And there you are. You're a Noble Soul, and glad you lost.

Did you take a beating at bridge? Didn't you sacrifice yourself and make a fourth when you'd have preferred to be alone communing with your soul? (And maybe you had bad cards, too.) Disappointed in love? Obviously not appreciated for your Finer Side. Not invited to that party when you should have been? Because you refuse to stoop to being a pusher. Of course not everybody in the world can be a martyr, but, be honest with yourself. Aren't you one?—Kansas City Times.

Cold Insurance

He carries it with him, ready for just such times. That little box of Bayer Aspirin. If he catches cold, what of it? Bayer Aspirin will stop it. If his throat feels sore, he will end the soreness with one good gargle made from these tablets.

Dangerous complications can follow the neglect of "a common cold." Every case of tonsillitis began with "just a sore throat." It's a wise plan to take aspirin after any undue exposure to bad weather, or whenever there is any chance that you've caught cold. If it's genuine aspirin it can't possibly hurt you; and how it does banish the aches and pains caused by colds, neuralgia, neuritis, lumbago, and even rheumatism.

Bayer Aspirin will insure your comfort through the worst cold season. The more susceptible you are to colds, the more you need it. Does not depress the heart.

Porcupines Destroy Trees

San Juan national forest officials have discovered a new enemy of trees—porcupines. The animals rub trees with their sharp quills, stripping a ring around them and causing them to "spike top," or die at the top first. Forest Supervisor Andrew Hutton estimated porcupines have caused as much damage to the timber during the last few years as that caused by fire. A campaign against them, he said, would be made.

Known as Sea Unicorn

The narwhal, an Arctic whale, is known also as the "sea unicorn."

Like the dolphin, it travels in schools, but it is seldom seen south of the polar seas. Little is known of it, but in the logs of old-time mariners, there was frequent report of the piercing of a vessel's hull by a narwhal's ivory tusks. Because the center of the tusk, or horn, is hollow, ivory of the narwhal has never achieved commercial importance.

THE SCOUT OATH

On my honor I will do my best—
1. To do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the Scout Law.
2. To help other people at all times.
3. To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight.

Be sure on all tests to receive credit on the records, Scouts.
The results of the contest will be given from time to time.

The knot board is being developed as a project by Harold Cappel.

Frank Drewitt and Harold Balaz are making miniature cabins of logs.

Other projects are being chosen.

Signaling is still one of the hardest tests yet one of the most enjoyable of the second and first class ranks.

Goal: Everyone know the semaphore code by February 12th.

A knot board, consisting of tenderfoot and other knots, has been started by the Scouts of troop 40.

The Scouts are hoping for a clear night, sometime in the future, so as to practice the scout pace. One mile must be covered in twelve minutes; within fifteen seconds of or fifteen seconds after the twelfth minute.

YOU WOULDN'T DO THIS!

With a view to impressing young minds with grave danger of dashing thoughtlessly into the street into the path of traffic, the upper half of the February safety poster just issued by the Chicago Motor Club to more than 26,000 schoolrooms in Illinois and Indiana portrays a boy, blindfolded, walking into the street, under a caption reading: "You Wouldn't Do This!"

The lower half, under another caption reading: "Then Why Do This?" shows a boy, running from oncoming traffic. The inference is that the lad might as well be blindfolded, in as much as he failed to look both ways before stepping off the curb.

The motor club is intensively stressing in the minds of school children the danger of running into the street.

A three-year survey of child traffic fatalities in Chicago reveal that nearly one-fourth of all child traffic deaths, or 24.09 per cent, was caused by this thoughtless practice.

Pointing out that many motorists have been robbed and some have been killed by those benefactors, the Chicago Motor Club warns car owners against giving rides to strangers or "hitch-hikers."

"It is unwise to 'pick up' a stranger at any time, anywhere," the club declared in a statement. "While some who solicit rides doubtless are worthy of assistance, there is no way in which the motorist can judge those who beg rides. Records of police departments practically everywhere corroborate the statement that it is dangerous to take a stranger into the car."

"In addition to the possibility of robbery or worse, the laws of some states provide that a 'guest,' or 'hitch-hiker,' injured when the car becomes involved in an accident as a result of the driver's negligence, can sue and recover damages from his 'host.' The Chicago Motor Club cannot too strongly advise against 'picking up strangers.'"

Petitions Being Circulated to Have Wolf Road Made A State Aid Road From Route 22 to Route 51 In Will County

Wolf Road is being given much consideration in Will County quite suddenly and it is understood that the plans of the county highway officials are for the completion of the paving of this road up to the Lincoln Highway this summer.

But in order to carry on the paving of Wolf road south of the Lincoln Highway to connect with route 51 in Green Garden township, it is first necessary to have the old Wolf Road right of way from route 22 to route 51 declared a state aid road so that this gap can be paved by the gas tax accruing to the county or by being made a part of the state's secondary road program, it is therefore necessary that the Will County Board of Supervisors make this portion of Wolf road a state aid road and with this view in mind, Frankfort boosters of Wolf road have drafted and are circulating the following petition asking the county board to make the portion named a state aid road. Copies of the petition are at the News-Bulletin office and the Mokena Motor Sales garage and all Wolf road boosters in both Mokena and Frankfort are urged to sign the petition which reads as follows:

To the Members of the Board of Supervisors of Will County;

Gentlemen:- In as much as the Wolf Road, when completed, in Cook County, will be of great importance to the traveling public and in as much as a connection with the Lincoln Highway in Frankfort Township will not complete a through traffic road of State Wide importance

Therefore we do hereby petition your Honorable Body that a State Aid Road described as follows be added to the State Aid System of Will County; Said new State Aid Road to begin at the Lincoln Highway at the east side of Section 19, Frankfort Township, and extend thence south between 19 and 20, 29 and 30, 31 and 32 in Frankfort Township, thence south-easterly to intersect with State Bond Issue 51, between Section 5 and 6 in Green Garden Township.

In the event of such approval by the Board of Supervisors of Will County, we do hereby request the County Clerk to mail a certified copy of this petition to G. N. Lamb, District Engineer, Elgin, Illinois, and to Frank T. Sheets, Chief State Highway Engineer, Springfield, Illinois.

Religious Education Council To Sponsor Young People's Conf.

The Will County Council of Religious Education will sponsor a Young People's conference under the direction of the Young People's Superintendent, Rev. L. V. Sittler of Plainfield. This conference will be held at the First Baptist Church in Joliet, Monday, February 22.

The morning session will be discussion groups for leaders of young people and for young people themselves. The afternoon session will be discussion groups on problems pertaining to young people, life and organization.

In the evening there will be a banquet, pep songs, musical numbers and an inspirational talk.

The ministers of the churches in Will County are urged to interest their young people in this project, a new venture for the Council in this county. Set aside Washington's birth day and spend the day at this conference. Details of the program will appear at a later date.

Red Cross Officials Pleased With Tinley School Hygiene Course

Officials of the Chicago Chapter of the American Red Cross today expressed satisfaction with the progress made by pupils of the Tinley Park School in the Red Cross course in Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick. Pupils in this class will finish their course of instruction in June.

Students are taught the principle of personal hygiene, how to keep in good health and how to care for others who are ill. They are given detailed instruction in best methods to handle, bathe, dress and feed babies and small children, how to make sick members of the family comfortable and are taught to serve competently in common ailments and emergencies. They are also urged to take part in the promotion and protection of community health.

Similar courses are offered by the Red Cross in practically every day and evening school in the Chicago district. The instructing nurses, most of whom are staff members of the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute, Rural Public Health Nurses of Cook County and other school nurses, are all accredited Red Cross Nurse instructors. In addition to credit for the course, the students receive a standard Red Cross certificate for their class work.

If One Only Could
A six-year-old hospital patient full of pain and distress after an appendicitis operation said, when the nurse had cooled his hot little face and his hands with a cool moist cloth: "Now, wash my pain!"—Hygeia.

HOW DOES YOUR HEATING PLANT RUN IN S-E-C-O-N-D?

■ It sounds easy to heat a house during a mild winter like the one we've been having. It sounds easy—but it isn't. Furnaces and boilers without automatic control do not operate satisfactorily in "second gear". When the weather is mild, they furnish more warmth than is needed. Houses are overheated . . . and the fuel supply shrinks almost as fast as during a cold winter.

■ Not so, however, when you heat with gas. Gas is ideally suited to any kind of winter. During mild weather or during cold weather, just enough fuel is used to keep the house at a comfortable temperature. Automatically. There is no fuel waste.

■ Remember, it's not too late to begin heating your home with gas this winter. Changing over to gas and having this automatic control simply requires installing a "conversion" burner in the fire box of your present heating plant. For an accurate estimate of what this change-over will cost and what your fuel bills will average over a typical heating season under the recently reduced gas house heating rates . . .

BASKET BALL

Glen Knakmuhs was the hero of the basket ball game between the Frankfort lightweights and Mokena High School last Friday. In the third overtime period, he made two free throws to win the game for Mokena 35 to 34.

The game was fast and replete with many fouls, there being fifteen fouls called on Mokena and fourteen called on Frankfort. At the end of the first quarter the new score board showed a score of 10 - 8 for Frankfort. At the half Frankfort was still two points in front the score being 17 - 15. In the third quarter Mokena crept up within one point of Frankfort to make the score 24 - 23. At the end of the game the score was tied 33 - 33.

During the fourth quarter the Mokena team was weakened by the loss of Muehler and W. Cappel through the personal foul route. Sippel also went out of the game in the first overtime period in the same manner.

Neither team was able to score in the first or second overtime. In the third overtime it was agreed by the coaches to comply with the rules stating "if the score is tied at the end of the second overtime period, the team which first scores two points in the third overtime period shall be the winner." Yunker of Mokena fouled a Frankfort player but he was only allowed one shot which he made but that did not come up to the required two points.

A Frankfort man fouled Knakmuhs while shooting and Knakmuhs made both free throws to make himself the hero of the evening in the eyes of all the Mokena fans.

In the grade team between Frankfort and Mokena, the two teams were quite evenly matched in the first half but in the second half the Mokena boys gradually drew away from their opponents, the final score being 32 - 22. Kohlhausen starred for Frankfort with 17 points.

In the curtain raiser the Cardinals held the Bruins scoreless while they were making three points thus winning 3-0. R. Nelson was the only player to score a basket in this game.

This Friday evening Orland comes here for three games, a grade boys game, a high school girls game and a high school boys game. On February 12, the high school first and second teams journey to Beecher to play the Beecher high school first and second teams.

NOW I'LL TELL

ONE

My mother could never help me much with my arithmetic, but Dad was always good at looking over figures.

Now the P. T. A. dues are due, now what will they do?

The Mokena city dads are going to put the Mokena streets back to the stone age.

The crooks of today are like the autos on display. They are both all steel bodies with speed and quick pick up.

During the coal stove season the top row of cans get dusty. That's the reason Charlie wears a green sweater so he can dust the cans off with his sleeve.

Lots of wives know embroidery and all its technical points. But fail to sew buttons on shirts. They leave that for the laundry company to do.

I suppose uncle will soon be using the automatic clutch.

A strange man took our pet dog and flees.

Every woman is a volume if you know how to read her.

Weakness and wickedness are twins.

There is one thing I can't understand about a wireless message. They say the air does the work of the wires, but how do they fasten the air to the poles?

The crowned heads in Europe are at it again. Pretty soon there won't be any kings.

Then how are we going to play Pinochle?

Gladys—"Do you know I can't wear those new hose of mine more than three times. They get so weak!"

Margaret—"That's strange."

Ida—"That does seem odd. The longer I wear mine the stronger they get."

Yours Truly,

ANN LOTTS

Remember
Way Back
When?

Mrs. Emil P. Krapp of Mokena wins the first box of candy on this one to ANN LOTTS.

Remember when girls wore rats in their hair, then jumped on a chair and screamed when they saw a mouse on the floor?

Sent in by Mrs. Emil Krapp, Mokena.

Remember when grand dad wore a long gray beard, and how lucky uncle John was that his whiskers matched the most beef gravy?

Remember when the girls first wore a peek-a-boo waist and how embarrassed they felt when a young man would stare at them?

They were different than the have-a-good-look waists of today.

Remember when the boy friend called with a one horse sleigh and a horse that knew the road?

Then we would cuddle up close on our way home and we would let the horse walk and our nose run.

I SAVE 50¢ A WEEK

I'm getting about 35 cigarettes from each pack of TARGET

I SWITCHED from ready-made cigarettes to the new Target Tobacco, and I've been saving over fifty cents a week ever since.

"But that isn't all. The cigarettes I roll from Target look and taste like ready-mades. I even find them consistently fresher."

"Target is real cigarette tobacco. It's a blend of Virginia, Burley and Turkish, just like the ready-mades use. That's what you get when you put out a dime for Target—30 to 40 of the best cigarettes you ever tasted. And who doesn't appreciate a real saving these days?"

"And you get 40 gummed papers free with every package."

AND GET THIS

The U. S. Government Tax on 20 cigarettes amounts to 6 cents. On 20 cigarettes you roll from Target tobacco the tax is just about one cent. And where there is a state tax on cigarettes, you save that much more. Besides, we offer you a MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE of complete satisfaction. Try a package. If you don't say they're the best cigarettes you ever rolled, return the half empty package, and your store man will return your dime.

Lock That Keeps Records

A recording lock that not only tells the time it was opened but the key that did it, has been invented, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. It can be used in connection with any standard make of door fitting. It prints on a tiny paper roll, like that in a cash register, what time it was opened. It has facilities for as many as six keys, each making its own forgery-proof imprint on the roll.

MUSCULAR-RHEUMATIC PAINS

DRAW them out with a "counter-irritant." Muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness—generally respond to good old Musterole. Doctors call it a "counter-irritant" because its warming action penetrates and stimulates blood circulation and helps to draw out infection and pain. It gets action and is not just a salve. But do not stop with one application. Apply this soothing, cooling, healing ointment generously to the affected area once every hour for five hours. Used by millions for over 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists.

To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Unguided

"Uncle, you are not married, are you?"

"No, darling."

"Then, who tells you what you ought not to do?"

In youth, you read of strange and fascinating places. When you are older, you visit them.

Is It Your Liver?

Elwood, Ind.—"After reading a good many letters from different people who have been benefited by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, I also can say that I used it with benefit," said Albert E. Goslin of 1623 So. 1 St. "My liver was in bad shape, I tried a good many tonics before being advised to take the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and I am glad to say that I am surprised at the results. It has helped me beyond my expectations. I most heartily recommend it to others as I am absolutely certain it will do for them what it has done for me." All druggists.

Seventy-five more men have gone to work for the city of Ottawa, the majority of them on the lateral canal, and the remainder on East Main street where a new sewer is being dug.

Workmen and teams are busily engaged on the Kuehne factory site in Mattoon. Work on the construction of the graduated fill for the switch track has been begun.

Within a short time all machinery is expected to be installed at the one-story frame, concrete, and steel fertilizer factory of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical corporation, at Kingshighway and Vandallia tracks, Rosemont. From 15 to 20 men will be employed at that time and it is anticipated that this number will be increased to about forty men by the middle of March.

The Rock Island lines returned 1,700 shophmen to work on January 18, on a five-day week in the locomotive and passenger car shops. The points affected were Silvis, Ill.; Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Horton, Kan., and Shawnee, Okla.

It has been announced that 150 men have returned to work on the Illinois Central shops at Burnside. The plant has been closed for two months.

Twenty-five men of Oblong have been given work on the new $15,000 banking room of the newly merged First National bank and Oil Belt National bank of that city.

The Walworth company will concentrate the manufacture of brass valves and fittings, formerly handled in the Boston plant, in Kewanee, Ill., and Greensburg, Pa. Machinery and equipment necessary for the maintenance of the new department is now arriving at the Kewanee works. Kewanee will benefit by this action as it will mean increased working hours per week for the brass valve and finishing department of the Kewanee works.

Franco mine No. 1 of the Cosgrove-Meehan Coal company at Marion, has resumed operations after a shutdown since last June. The mine will employ 400 men.

Kewanee is planning a $47,000 park project as a result of the will of Emerit E. Baker, president of the Kewanee Boiler corporation. A minimum of 40 men will be employed on the project and by alternating the work into two three-day weeks, 80 men, all heads of families, will be put to work.

Dorothy's Mother Proves Claim

Children don't ordinarily take to medicines but here's one that all of them love. Perhaps it shouldn't be called a medicine at all. It's more like a rich, concentrated food.

It's pure, wholesome, sweet to the taste and sweet in your child's little stomach. It builds up and strengthens weak, puny, underweight children, makes them eat heartily, brings the roses back to their cheeks, makes them playful, energetic, full of life. And no bilious, headachy, constipated, feverish, fretful baby or child ever failed to respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup on their little bowels. It starts lazy bowels quick, cleans them out thoroughly, tones and strengthens them so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

Millions of mothers know about California Fig Syrup from experience. A Western mother, Mrs. J. G. Moore, 119 Cliff Ave., San Antonio, Texas, says: "California Fig Syrup is certainly all that's claimed for it. I have proved that with my little Dorothy. She was a bottle baby and very delicate. Her bowels were weak. I started her on Fig Syrup when she was a few months old and it regulated her, quick. I have used it with her ever since for colds and every little set-back and her wonderful condition tells better than words how it helps."

Don't be imposed on. See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name, "California" so you'll get the genuine, famous for 50 years.

The Last Laugh

As Eddie Cantor, the comedian, was standing in front of a theater where all seats had been sold, a little man and his wife were turned away, greatly disappointed. "Here," said Eddie, "I'll let you have a couple of my seats," and he gave the little man two tickets. Delighted, the man gave Eddie his card, saying, "Some day I hope I may be able to do something for you." The comedian looked at the card. The little man was an undertaker. — Capper's Weekly.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for February 7

THE SLAVERY OF SIN (TEMPERANCE LESSON)

LESSON TEXT—John 8:31-36.
GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Tells Us How to Be Free.
JUNIOR TOPIC—How Jesus Makes Us Free.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Fight for Freedom.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Slavery or Freedom?

We are living in a day of boasted freedom. Revolt from authority is almost universal. Anarchy lifts up its vicious head in the home, society, business, state, nation, and the world. It is this spirit which is revolting against the Eighteenth amendment under the pretext of liberty and freedom. Sin which is fundamentally and essentially lawlessness (1 John 3:4) is back of all violations of the Eighteenth amendment. The vital truth of this lesson is the only solution of the prohibition question.

1. Discipleship and Freedom (vv. 31, 32).

Violators of the Eighteenth amendment are not true disciples of Christ. Some church men may be against this law, but not true disciples. In these verses Jesus indicates the following stages of discipleship:

1. Believe on Jesus (v. 31). This means not only assent to Christ's teaching, but acknowledgment of his authority. It means to give Christ the place of lordship over the life. All who allow Christ to rule their lives are in sympathetic obedience to the national constitution.

2. Continue in Christ's words (v. 31). To continue in his Word means:

a. Meditation upon it.
b. Confidence in it.
c. Prayer over it.
d. Obedience to it.

The teachings of Jesus Christ constitute the standard of life for every true disciple. His words are adequate for every decision, habit, or duty. The word of God is the sole and adequate rule of authority to the Christian. Indulgence in intoxicating liquor is prohibited by God's Word, even to the extent that drunkards are debarred from heaven (1 Cor. 6:10).

3. Assurance (v. 31). "Ye are my disciples indeed." Continuance in Christ's words demonstrates the fact of discipleship.

4. Knowledge of the truth (v. 32). Those who obey Christ enter upon higher knowledge. They have an experiential knowledge. Demands made by God's Word are not always apprehended at the first, but those who continue in the ways of obedience come to know God and see that what he demanded was right (John 13:7).

5. Freedom (v. 32). The one who renders implicit obedience to Christ enters upon real freedom (Romans 8:2).

11. Righteousness and Freedom (vv. 33, 34).

Those who practice sin are in slavery. The evil doer is under the mastery of the Devil; "whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin." Doctor Pierson says that the sinner's slavery is threefold:

1. Slavery to guilt.
2. Slavery to penalty or judgment.
3. Slavery to power or habit.

A little thought shows the abjectness of this slavery. Consciousness of guilt is universal. All know that judgment is coming. In the sober moments of life all men acknowledge coming judgment and have "a certain fearful looking for of judgment." All know that they are helpless to break their habits of wrongdoing. Freedom is possible only in conformity with the divine will.

111. Sonship and Freedom (vv. 35, 36).

Regeneration is necessary in order to obtain freedom from sin. Sin's power must be broken through the salvation of the individual. The works of the Devil can only be destroyed through the regeneration of the individual. Happily Christ can destroy the Devil's works through the sonship of those who believe on him (1 John 3:7-9). The only way to secure sonship on the part of man is to get him saved through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. The Eighteenth amendment can no more make a nation sober than the ten commandments can make a man tell the truth and desist from murder. The only way to get the benefit of the Eighteenth amendment is to have a revival. It is in securing the sinner's freedom by bringing him as a child into the family of God. So long as people are ignorant of Christ they will remain in bondage to sin. Sin is a hard taskmaster and has as its end death (Romans 6:23).

Your face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty of your skin. To remove wrinkles use one ounce powdered Saddle dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel. At drug stores.

Health Associated With

Slimness and Laughter

The old advice, "Laugh and grow fat," is out of date. Not many years ago fatness was regarded as a sign of robust health, but we know now that it is undesirable even in babies or young children.

Dr. Lechmere Anderson, medical officer for Doncaster, England, claims that the phrase should be "Laugh and grow healthy." "Laughter," he says, "is essentially associated with good health, but adipose tissue, if at all undue, cannot be regarded as a favorable condition. Leanness of body is far more likely to be associated with strength and energy."

The fat person, he explains, has to make his heart and his muscles work far harder than they were designed to do, since they are called upon to deal with an extra load of from one to many pounds. For those who wish to become slim and healthy Doctor Anderson recommends the taking of little sugar, bread, or starchy foods—and laughter.

Warm Compliment

Betty was a plump young matron who realized that her fondness for gay colors must be restrained in her choice of street clothes, in order not to emphasize her bulk. Therefore she hailed the fashion of bright-colored "hostess pajamas" with enthusiasm, and invested in a bright red set. She waited with patience for her husband to come home that evening and comment on her looks. He walked in, took a look at her splendor, and remarked, with more candor than kindness, "Heavens, Betty, you look like a blazing barn!"

His Kind Deed

A lad who has been taught to do a kind deed each day was having a heart-to-heart talk with his mother at bedtime.

"Did you do a kind deed today?" mother asked.

"Yes, Mary's curls were on my desk when she leaned back in her seat at school. The teacher was looking and I didn't pull her hair," replied the lad.

O. Henry's Short Stories

Jimmy Hayes and Muriel—I

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service)

Drawn by John Hix

Supper was just over in the Texas Rangers' camp when the men heard the scraping of stirrups against chaparral. Then they heard a cheerful voice: "Brace up, Muriel, old girl—hey, now, quit trying to kiss me. This paint hoss ain't any too shore-footed."

The rangers listened cautiously, and then a tired "paint" pony single-footed into camp. A gangling youth shouted: "Hi, fellows, here's a letter for the lieutenant." Of "Muriel," whom he had been talking to, nothing was seen.

He dismounted, unsaddled. The Ranger lieutenant read his letter and introduced him to the boys as Jimmy Hayes, a recruit from El Paso. The men received him cordially but suspiciously. On the border your sidekicker's nerve may mean your life or death.

With a quizzical smile Jimmy introduced "Muriel." Out of his shirt crawled a horned frog, a bright red ribbon around its spiky neck. One of the rangers grinned and asked: "Does it know it?" Jimmy handed the frog over and it hopped right back to him.
